U. S. Ambassador Calls On Italian Dictator

By STEWART BROWN
United Press Staff Correspondent

ROME — Diplomatic circles in close contact with the American embassy said today that American ambassador William Phillips, in a long conversation with Premier Benito Mussolini last night, expressed the hope of President Roosevelt that there would be no new developments in the European situation which would jeopardize European or even world peace.

The United States embassy declined to give the slightest indication of the purpose of the visit which Phillips paid to Mussolini last night. It was said at the embassy that any information must come either from Washington or from the Italian government.

Fascist officials maintained an equally strict silence. So far they had not even issued the usual communique to inform the public that the ambassador had seen the premier.

The diplommatic source which informed the United Press of the nature of the ambassador's visit, however, was firm in the belief that Phillips transmitted the president's wish that nothing would happen in Europe to endanger peace.

Even before the nature of Phillip's visit to Mussolini was made known, it was evident that its circumstances were unusual.

Ambassador Phillips returned to his post just before Christmas after a visit to the United States and extended conferences with President Roosevelt. Immediately, he requested an audience of premier Mussolini. Mussolini was absent from the city and necessarily the visit was delayed. Mussolini returned to Rome Monday. So urgent was the nature of the ambassador's instructions, apparently, that despite a heavy calendar of appointments, Mussolini arranged to see him yesterday. Phillips visited him at the Venice Palace at 7 o'clock last night, and spent 40 minutes with him.

How important such a visit might be it was easy to see.

One week from today, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain is to arrive here with Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, for a most important official visit to Mussolini.

It has been generally assumed that, during this visit, Mussolini will seek to discuss Italian aspirations for concessions in the Meriterranean.

These concessions would come largely from France—a change in the status of Italians resident in French Tunicia, a reduction of rates in the Suez Canal and concession to Italy of a share in the Canal's control, a change in status in the French port of Djibouti, Somaliland, which would permit Italy a free flow of goods to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, on the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad which is French owned.

So far Italy has made no official move to obtain any concessions.

A "REFRESHMENT AFTER THE PAUSE"

The public has heard much about "The Pause that Refreshes"—and they are going to hear more of it still, for the Coca-Cola Bottling Company has just arranged for a liberal schedule of advertising in newspapers from coast to coast.

The Daily Star and The Sentinel feel disposed to speak of the return of the makers of America's most famous drink to their first love, in the placement of advertising, as a "Refreshment after the Pause."

Coca-Cola has, from the beginning, been one of America's foremost advertisers as well as one of its most famous products.

Coca-Cola after years of experience with all kinds of Advertising is placing the big drive in '39 through newspapers.

Fish Asks For Investigation

By JOHN R. BEAL
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Rep. Hamilton Fish, demanded a congressional investigation today of private parties abroad the government boat Eala in which former secretary of commerce Daniel C. Roper and other officials were alleged to have participated.

Fish said that if Roper or any official spent public money for non-public purposes, he should be forced to reimburse the government.

Acting comptroller general Richard N. Elliott charged in his annual report to Congress yesterday that in 1934 and 1935, soda water, flowers, cigars and cigaretts "were vouchered as paint, provisions or supplies for the Eala. He estimated that the boat, which belongs to the steamboat inspection service of the department of commerce, costs $380 a week to operate, and that in the six months period on which he reported, $9,506 was spent "which was not authorized under the appropriation providing for inspection service."

Rep. John Taber, R., N. Y. contended that republican members of the house appropriations committee "exposed" the private parties aboard the Eala two or three years ago. Fish said that the small republican minority had made it impossible to take action then, but predicted that this year's doubled G. O. P. house membership, together with "honest minded democrats, would force an investigation.

Elliott promised a special report on the Eala. He offered as part of his annual report excerpts from the ship's log.

They indicated that the boat was used for trips from Washington down the Potomac to Colonial Beach, Va., during July and August, 1934.

Among those listed as having used the boat for parties were Roper, assistant secretary John Dickinson, Chester H. McCall, assistant to the secretary, Margie G. Renn, Roper's secretary, Mrs. Roper, Richard F. Roper, John Roper, and assistant secretary Ewing Y. Mitchell.

COUNCIL ADJOURNS UNTIL THURSDAY NIGHT

After one of the most momentuos sessions in its history, the City Council of Grenada adjourned last Monday night to meet again Thursday.

An unusually large crowd was present as a matter of interest in the newly proposed WPA paving project for Grenada and a petition for a filling station permit.

Both of the somewhat controversial matters were left for consideration at the adjourned meeting which is in session as The Sentinel goes to press.

A petiton of protest, signed by 169 persons, and alleged by some of the Council members to have been instigated by the Street Commissioner, drew fire from some of the Councilmen.

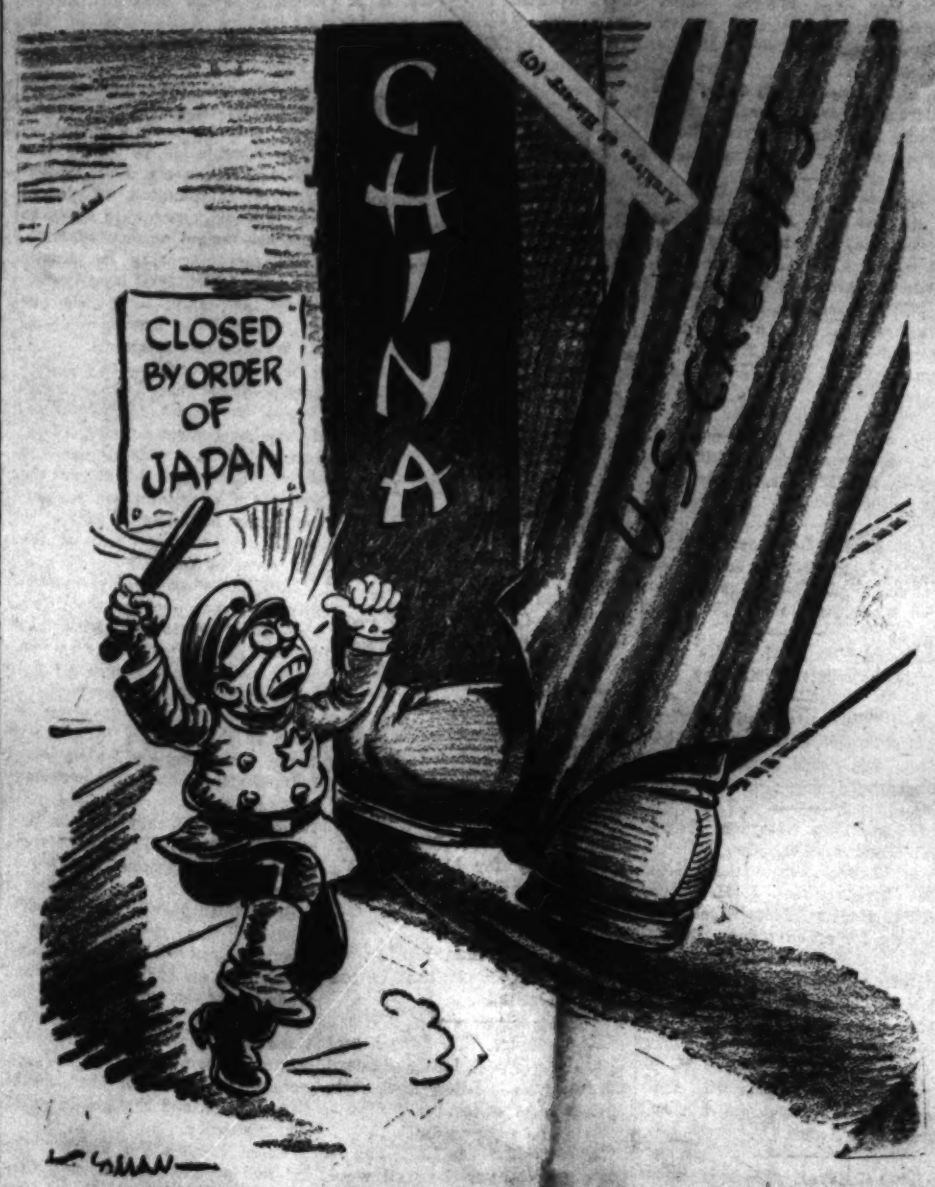
Frank Vestal of the Memphis Commercial Appeal and Judge Stevenson of Oxford will be officials for the Trials.

KEEPING THE DOOR OPEN



Reporter Aboard Panay, Back From Two Wars, Tells of Vivid Moments

EDITOR'S NOTE: Weldon James, United Press Staff Correspondent now on leave of absence, and the only American newspaperman aboard the U. S. gunboat Panay when it was sunk by Japanese aircraft, has written five stories concerning his activities as a war correspondent in both the Far East and Spain. James moved from China to Spain in mid-1938. He is on leave in this country now.

By WELDON JAMES

NEW YORK—Slightly more than a year ago a single bomb probably spelled the difference between continued friendship and cancellation of diplomatic relations by the United States and Japan.

That bomb was one of 24 hurled from Japanese aircraft upon the U. S. S. Panay. It made the best hit of all—almost squarely amidships—but it was slightly defective. Instead of exploding on contact, it plowed harmlessly through two decks, then burst against the keel, blasting a 40-foot hole.

Had it burst when it first hit the deck, probably not a man of the 68 aboard the tiny gunboat would have lived to tell about it, and the surge of indignation that swept America after the attack might have forced the suspension of diplomatic relations between the two nations. As it was, only four died in the Panay attack, and history saw a peaceful, conciliatory end to the incident of Dec. 12, 1937.

Other bombs struck the gunboat's side, the forward end, the water around, and more than half of those remaining aboard the Panay were wounded by bomb fragments or machine-gun bullets.

I was standing aft on the top deck when the attack began, enjoying the bright sunshine, leaning over the deck-rail, talking with other civilians, grumbling, ironically enough, at being in such a quiet place. The Panay was anchored in the middle of the broad Yangtze, 28 miles above Nanking.

The first warning of danger was not the sight or even the sound of the nine attacking planes, but the strange, spine-chilling whistle of a descending bomb. We had just lighted "three on a match," despite protests of Capt. Frank N. Roberts (military attache), but it took only a split second when that sound came to drop everything, flatten out on deck, and wait for the shower of bomb fragments to follow up the deafening explosion as the bomb struck the forward end . . .

That was at 1:38 p. m. The attack continued for 25 minutes, the planes returning intermittently to power-dive, machine gun and drop bombs. The order to abandon ship was given when it became apparent that the stout little boat was sinking. When I left, in the last boat, the tilting main deck was under 3 inches of the Yangtze's swirling water.

The Panay keeled over to starboard and sank at 3:54. We quit tending the wounded long enough to stare in throat-choked fascination . . . A rescue party of British and Americans picked up the survivors two and a half days later.

Terrible, thrilling time, that long-gone afternoon, but one that will live in memory because of the heroism and bravery of the Panay's crew. Sailors surged into action without waiting for orders, to fight back with machine guns. The performances of Ernest Mahlmann, John Lang, Lieut. Arthur F. Anders and all the others (some since decorated) who saw their duty but did more, have been recognised by the navy and the American people.

Deer and Kangaroo Pals

PASADENA, Cal. —A new one in the line of animal friendships has developed at the local zoo. It is between a young mule deer of this continent and a kangaroo from Australia. They are inseparable companions in the daytime and bunk together at night.

NEW YORK — Bernard Davis supervised his friends who called today to inquire about his funeral and to console his "widow." He assured them, personally, that he hadn't killed himself and that Mrs. Davis didn't need any sympathy.

He had a party last night to celebrate the fact that the police deparment and newspapers erroneously reported him dead. All his relatives and several friends who had gone to mourn were guests. The telephone rang every few minutes. It was usually someone inquiring about the funeral. Davis answered all calls.

He and Mrs. Davis had gone to Wilkes Barre, Pa., on a 10-day vacation and left a border, John F. Flury, staying in their home. Flury, was out when they left so Davis put a note in the kitchen asking him to take care of the gold fish.

Flury ran a tube from the kitchen stove to his mouth, wrapped a sweater around his head and died a suicide Sunday night. He had been ill. Policemen overlooked a note he had left, found the note about the goldfish signed by Davis, and misinterpreted it. Neighbors also falsely identified the dead man as Davis, presumably because they made the identification while the man's head was still hidden by the sweater.

Davis' brother, Myer Davis, was notified by police. He telephoned Mrs. Davis at Wilkes Barre.

"I called to let you know that Bernard has killed himself by inhaling gas at home," he told her.

Mrs. Davis disputed that. She informed the brother that she and her husband were at that moment having breakfast together.

Myer Davis suggested that they hurry home and straighten things out, which they did.

The President Says Keep On Spending

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Addressing Congress, President Roosevelt warned Congress of the dangers to Democracy from within and from without the United States. He unmistakably threatened economic sanctions against aggressor countries.

Asserting that the United States would decline to intervene with arms. Mr. Roosevelt said "there are other methods of commanding decent respect for the opinions of mankind.

He asked specifically for amendment of the neutrality act to the end that the possibility of its being an aid to aggressors would be removed, and said "foreign nations were threatening American institutions such as free press, religion, democracy and international good faith."

To protect the nation, it was asked by the Chief Executive in his address, that armaments be strengthened.

"To protect the nation from within, he proposed a 'perfect sosial order to make the nation strong and united'." To this he asked for the passage of the controversial Reorganization bill, railroad legislation, end of labor strife, improvement of social security system, medical care for the needy, revamping of tax structures continuation of federal spending, perfection of farm program.

The president warned Congress that curtailment of spending program would be over his protest, and asked that it be continued.

Grenada Industries Outgrow Building

Grenada Industries, within one year after the beginning of operations has outgrown the present building facilities, according to a statement made Wednesday by E. L. Morrow to the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and other Grenada citizens.

According to Mr. Morrow, who is an official at the hosiery mill, the number of employes at present is 240, over double the 100 which was promised by the owners of the industry and the payroll is hitting a stride which will hit the annual mark of over $200,000.

It is understood that considerable expansion is probable if additional floor space can be secured.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Chamer of Commerce plans were discussed that ma lead to the employment of 500 by the Industry.

'39 Eclipses To Be Partial of Sun, Moon

EVANSTON, Ill. — Partial eclipses of the sun and moon will be visible in the United States during 1939, according to Dr. Oliver Lee, director of the Northwestern University astronomy department.

Dr. Lee said a total eclipse of the moon May 3 will be visible in the Eastern Hemisphere, while a total eclipse of the sun will occur Oct. 12 and will be seen as a partial eclipse from western Australia and the southern tip of South America.

An annualar eclipse of the sun April 19 will be partial in the United States, he said, explianing that an annualar eclipse is one occurring while the moon is so far away from the earth that a rim of the sun is visible even at the moment of maximum eclipse.

Meteoric Showers Promised

Dr. Lee said that a partial eclipse of the moon would be visible throughout the Americas about midnight between Oct. 27 and 28. He said there also would be two particularly bright meteoric showers.

"The principal meteoric showers," he said, "will be the Perseids on Aug. 12, early in the morning in the northeastern sky, and the Leonids, which will be seen after midnight on Nov. 14 in the eastern sky."

Meteoric showers derive their name from constellations in that part of the sky from which they appear to come.

Dr. Lee said other displays during the year will be the Lyrids, early in the evening in the northwest, April 20; the Orionids, late in the evening in the east, Oct. 20, and the Andromids, high in the eastern sky, all night Nov. 24.

Bright Cometa Unlikely

"No bright cometa are expected this year, but there is always the chance that a big comet will stray," he explained. "Some of them take thousands of years to make one trip around the sun, and many have not ben recorded. The last bright comet visible from the earth passed in 1910."

The remainder of the winter will be a good time to watch the Northern Lights," Dr. Lee said, pointing out that these displays are connected with the sun spots which now are reaching a maximum in their 11-year period.

As for the planets, Jupiter will be in view for another month. Mars will be visible late in the evening during spring, Venus will be a morning planet during the same period, and then will pass beyond our field of vision until 1940, the astronomist said.

BOARD ADJOURNS

The Grenada County Board of Supervisors after taking care of the regular routine of business for the county adjourned Wednesday afternoon.

RIGHT COMBINATION OF BEST CIGARETTE TOBACCOS

The right combination of the world's best cigarette tobaccos in a blend that can't be copied is the theme of the national newspapec adveritsing for the first quarter of 1939 just released by the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company for Chesterfield Cigarettes.

In continuing its country-wide campaign in both newepapers and magazines Chesterfield forcefully repeats the mildness and good taste of Chesterfield's fine quality tobaccos and continues to drive hmoe the pleasure of smoking the cigarette that satisfies.

Chesterfield's "right combination" story is enlivened and humanized by the use of photographs of well-known personalities such as Hal Sims, the bridge expert, Veloz and Yolanda, society dancers, The Flying Wallandas of circus fame, Miss Marilyn, winner of the recent Miss America contest, the famous Rockettes of Radio City Music Hall, George Brent, Olivia de Havillnad and John Payne of the picture "Wings of the Navy"and others of national note.

Rebels Gain In Spanish War

By HARRISON LAROCHE

HENDAYE, French - Spanish Frontier — Nationalist armies threatened to cut the two great arteries into the heart of loyalist Catalania today.

At both the northern and southern ends of the 90-mile front in western Catalonia, insurgent armies claimed to be 62 miles from the loyalist capital of Barcelona with army corps not yet in action.

Two important victories—not conceded by the loyalists—put the insurgents in position for what they termed "vital to opening up possibilities for the future campaign."

In the north, the insurgents menaced the vital Lerida-Barcelona highway after capturing Artesa de Segre, key to the entire network of loyalist communications and fortifications in the area. Dispatches from Burgos indicated that Generalissimo Francisco Franco planned to attack southeast from Artesa and attempt to cut the highway at Terraga.

BOUND TO BE READ

Old as it is, the American Constitution is a living, vigorous document, still in a sense in its formative stage; and one on the meaning of whose words men who have made it a special study can still disagree. Since the first Roosevelt election of 1932 it has been a constant subject for discussion and for controversy.

In December, 1937, on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the Constitution, a number of papers on it were read at a meeting of the American Historical Association at Philadelphia. They were read by some of the leading scholars of this country. Twenty-seven of them, with the addition of an introduction, are reproduced in "The Constitution Reconsidered" (Columbit University Press), edited by Conyers Read.

That the papers, written for such a memorable occasion and by such a distinguished group of men as those who contributed, should be a really valuable contribution to the history of the Constitution is no surprise. They are not dry discussions of a much discussed historic document but an addition to a living story.

—The papers fall into three parts—the background of political, economic and social ideas behind the Constitution; the Constitution and its influence upon American thought, and repercussions of the Constitution outside the United States. They go back to the origins of the Constitution in British history, they have to do with the Constitution itself, and they discuss the effect of our Constitution on other, newer ones in foreign countries. They are not simply for the scholar but for anyone who is interested in the Constitution, in its birth and its growth, in just what it means today and may mean in the future.

A good many men and women of American birth have been drawn irresistibly to England, and in the quiet atmosphere of the Old World have done their best work.

Logan Pearsall Smith, an American of old Quaker stock, is one of them. It was in 1888 that after studying at Harvard he was able with his reluctant manufacturer—and evangelist—father to buy an annuity and go abroad to live. He went first to Oxford, and it is evident that in his review of his life, "Unforgotten Years" (Little Brown), he has never regretted his decision. His life has been a placid one, but full of interest.

Of his boyhood, his student days, his life in London and Paris and other cities, of his many friendships and his work. Smith writes with a golden pen—one can not imagine him using a typewriter. The book shows the author's life to have been a happy one. It is interesting that he deems it necessary to devote a chapter to the defense of "expatriates," those Americans who have gone abroad to live.

He points out that nobody thinks it strange if an Englishman comes to this country to live, and comments: ". . . Among my own contemporaries, those Americans who have made their home in Europe—Whistler and Henry James Sarbent and Mary Cassatt and Mrs. Wharton—are, in my opinion, more likely to be remembered than those who stayed at home."

When Jill Hamilton stopped two men on a street in London's West End to ask them for a match, she changed the course of several lives For, as Jerrard Tickell relates in his entertaining "Jill Fell Down" (Morrow), the young society woman was arrested for soliciting and locked in jail.

The subsequent ostracism of Jill and her fight to recover her good name gave Tickell the opportunity to exercise his excellent talents on both conservation and situation.

Like the earlier "Fly Away Blackbird," his newer effort moves along at a swift, merry and sophisticated pace. An excellent sense of dramatic pacing makes "Jill Fell Down" good entertainment.

It is nearly 150 years since the organization of the Federal Society of Journeymen Cordwainers marked the birth of the American trade union movement, and, five years after its organization, held the first organized strike—which the union won after a fight of nine weeks. The struggle of labor goes on through th Meechanics' Union of Trade Asaociations, the Workingmen's party, the unions of the typographers, the hat finishers and others of post-Civil War days, and the Knights of Labor, to the American Federation of Labor, the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Labor party.

Herbert Harris in "American Labor" (Yale University Press), has tried to write an impartial, authorative, complete history of the labor movement as a whole, the growth of the unions, the experiments in politics, the struggle for conditions and the less publicized but nonetheless continuous and vigorous fight of organiztaions of employers against every phase of independent unions.

"American Labor" is a history of the entire labor movement, so that it becomes a history of one of the important parts of the growth of the United States. It goes thoroughly into the early history of unionism and, as Harris has been a nationally known writer on contemporary labor problems for many years, he has been able to get into his book the remarkable recent history of unions, and of social progress, so that such things as the birth of the C. I. O., the sit-down strike, which he traces back to 1906, the labor relations and social security acts and the American Labor Party are included. So are the stories of the labor leaders since the early days of the country.

X-Ray Penetrate Five-Inch Irons

NEW YORK —A new and portable X-Ray machine, whose radiations are equivalent to those of $90,000,000 worth of radium and which may be transported on flat cars to industrial sites, has been developed by the General Electric Company, it was announced today.

It weighs two tons, but despite its unwieldliness, it is considered a vast improvement over the old X-Ray equipment, which required a special building 62 feet long, 32 feet wide and 36 feet high for its installation.

Its main use will be in cancer research at hospitals, but vast possibilities for it in the industrial field also were foreseen. It can make radiographic examinations of steel castings five inches or more in thickness.

The machine is small enough for installation in hospitals but it is designed to operate on 1,000,000 volts. The old machine, developed in 1933, operated on 800,000 volts and required tons of lead sheathing to protect the operators.

L. E. Dempster and W. F. Westerndrop built the new equipment. The cost was not revealed but it was said to have been less than that of the 1933 machine.

Over 300,000 At Bowls Games

By HENRY SUPER
United Press Staff Correspondent

Tennessee, Texas Christian and Southern California today were the undisputed "big three" of 1938 football on for which stood like the Rock of Gibraltar on post-season gridirons.

For Tennessee and T. C. U. yesterday's victories meant perfect seasons of 11 victories each while Southern California climaxed one of the greatest comebacks of all time by defeating Duke with a story book finish, 7-3, in the Rose Bowl, daddy of all the post-season classics.

Tennessee throttled Oklahoma's power and handed the Sooners their first defeat in 15 games, winning 17-0 in the Miami Orange Bowl. Texas Christian, with little Davey O'Brien and big Ki Aldrich playing the starring holes, licked a game Carnegie Tech eleven, 16-7, in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl.

St. Mary's fought off a brilliant last quarter rally and handed Texas Tech its first defeat of the season, 20-13, in the Dallas Cotton Bowl. Utah defeated New Mexico, 26-0, in the El Paso Sun Bowl; the West defeated the East 14-0 at San Francisco and the North won over the South, 7-0, in the first meeting between all-star teams from opposite sides of the Mason-Dixon line. At Honolulu, University of California at Los Angeles defeated University of Hawaii, 32-7, in the first Pineapple Bowl game.

A total of 318,241 persons saw the eight games and in all cases save one—the East-West contest—the favorites were victorious. In addition to Texas Tech, Oklahoma and Duke also had perfect records ruined. Of the three, Duke, which hadn't even been scored on all season, came closeest to winning.

in the last period had put Duke ahead 3-0 and with 40 seconds left to play, the Trojans scored a touchdown. The final stab was a bullet pass from Doyle Nave, a substitute all season, to Al Krueger, sophomore end. The victory ran U. S. C.'s Rose Bowl victory to five straight, The largest crowd in history—93,000— saw it.

T. C. U., trailing 7-6 at the half, came back brilliantly to beat Carnegie. O'Brien, unanimou all-American quarterback, lived up to his reputati by pitching one touchdown pass, setting up another score through the air and kicking a field goal. He heaved a 16-yard pass to Clark in the first period that put T. C. U. on the Tech four-yard line, and on the second play afterward, Sparks scored.

Little Pete Moroz, substituting at fullback for the injured Jack Lee, put Carnege aihead late in the first half by passing 35 yards to George Muha for a touchdown. Muha kicked the point. In the third period, O'Brien threw a 25-yard touchdown pass to Horner and kicked a field goal from the ten yard line in the fourth. Aldrich at center was a demon on offense and defense.

Oklahoma was probably the biggest disappointment of the day. The Sooners made only 25 yards rushing and 69 passing against Tennessee before a crowd of 32,-191—largest ever to see a sporting event in Florida. Bob Foxx and Walter Wood made touchdowns for Tennessee in the first and last periods and Captain Bowden Wyatt, end, kicked a field goal in the second.

76th Congress In Session Today

WASHINGTON — The 76th Congress assembling today faces far-reaching national defense problems unequalled since the World War, peace time record for military and naval expenditures probably will be broken.

Indications that sharp congressional scrutiny will meet the defense program have appeared despite strong sentiment among returning senators and representatives far adequate preparedness. Republicans have charged that the administration seeks to divert attention from domestic reverses by booming the war drums.

Tomorrow, President Roosevelt ascends the rostrum of the House to deliver in person an annual message of which the most vital section is expected to deal with the alarms of war spreading around the world.

Unless advance indications fail, that message will outline the course Mr. Roosevelt proposes that the nation follow in meeting threats from rising international tensions.

This program, as thus far outlined, is expected to fall in two phases:

1. Sharp increases in American arms preparedness, featuring a defense budget of $1,300,000,000 to $1,500,000,000. This will provide a vast air-armada up to 12,000 planes, possible construction of two super-dreadnaughts of 45,000 tons, re-vitalization of regular army forces and expansion of aviation manpower.

2. Vigorous prosecution of the policy of "continental solidarity," designed to isolate North and South America from the dangers of aggression in Europe and Asia.

Fireworks Crack at City Council Meet

The proverbial fireworks broke loose at the regular Council meeting last night when councilmen criticized Street Commissioner Claude Hall for alleged acticity in connection with petition to delay the street paving program which is partially financed by a WPA grant.

Intercessions by City Attorney Cowles Horton and H. J. Ray nad Frank Gerard left a motion for the removal of the street commissioner by Alderman McEachin inactive, and consideration of the pettiion opposing procedure on the paving was delayed until Thursday night at which time the Council will meet again.

The petition bore 170 names, but signer is reported to have requested the removal of his name.

Several other matters were also delayed until the Thursday night meeting, including the application of W. K. Huffington for a permit to construct a filling station at the corner of Line and South Streets.

Game In Own Back Yard

WEWOKA, Okla. — A game preserve in his own back yard is the culmination of an idea James K. Mulkey, Wewoka real estate man, has had for years. The preserve is located at the Hagen lake south of Wewoka and occupies about one and one-half acres. Mulkey has collected numerous species of fish and frogs, wild geese, quail and pheasants.

Goats Become The Goats

UKIAH, Cal. — Goats were made the goat of an animal farm experiment here. The Spring brothers installed a goat ranch near here, but when the goats failed to make it a paying investment they turned it into a mink ranch. However, they are still raising enough goats to provide food for their carnivorous fur bearers.

A POWERFUL PRAYER

Speaking of picturesque speech, the following invocation was delivered by the Rev. Jim McCoy, opening a prayer meeting in a Georgia turpentine camp:

"Or Lawd, give Thy servant dis mawnin' de eyes ob de eagle and de wisdom ob de owl; connect his houl wid de gospel telephone in de cental skies; 'luminate his brow wid de sun ob heaven; turpentine his imagination; grease his lips wid possum oil; loosen his tongue wid de sledge hammer ob Thy power; 'lectrify his brain wid de lightning ob Thy word; put petual motion in his arms; fill him plum full ob dynamite ob Thy glory; 'noint him all over wid kerosene ob Thy salvation and den, deah Lawd—ignite him on fire!"

PRESS AND FOREIGN COMMENT ON THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

NEW ORLEANS Times Picayune (Ind-Dem.) — On very first reading the president's address to Congress impresses us as eloquent and interesting, but not very illuminating. He listed the subjects he considers of major present importance, but reserved the details of his plans for dealing with them. So the message that was expected to give a fairly definite line on the administration's program leaves that program as indefinite as before. . . . Generalities, however sound, or eloquent, or both, do not constitute the working plans and proposals Congress expects from the President.

Scripps-Howard Newspapers (Ind):—We feel all the abhorrence that Mr. Roosevelt voiced for dictatorships. Yet we think that some of his eloquent castigations of the political beliefs and systems of other peoples might better have been left unsaid . . . We can't impose our own concepts of the right on the world, and . . . understanding among nations is not prompted by name-calling across the seas. And the job ahead of us at home, of setting our own house in order and preparing our own defenses is big enough to command all our energies. If we can do that job we will win far more respect abroad than . . . . by international rough talk. . . . But we can't make this an 80-billion Dollar Country by depending on the process which the President over-emphasized in one part of his address. If big government spending were enough to build permanent prosperity we would already have reached the goal. Real jobs at living wages are not produced by WPA programs. Reckless spending drives into hiding more dollars than it puts into circulation.

NEW YORK Times:—So far as domestic matters are concerned it must be admitted that it is disheartening to find Mr. Roosevelt still championing the theory that government spending on a lavish scale is needed to produce prosperity . . . . when so much in the record clearly shows that government spending is a relatively small factor and that prosperity has been achieved many times . . . without the use of the inherently dangerous device . . . . But at least it can be said that an eloquent voice has expressed the deep moral indignation which is felt throughout this country against the policies of of ruthlessness and conquest and that our government is plainly moving toward the asumption of a larger share of those responsibilities. . . .

LONDON JUBILANT

LONDON — Denunciations came from Dictatorships and praise from Democracies today while European leaders studied the message of President Roosevelt to the 76th Congress.

More and more plainly comment on the message showed, the European dictators saw the United States as a potential enemy and the Democracies saw it as a powerful friend.

In Totalitarian countries, apparently, the President's plea for strong American defense seemed to be interpreted as a threat; in Great Britain and France, the President's call for unity and strength and his criticism that the present neutrality laws favors aggressors, were taken as good news for peace loving nations.

How many among Europe's 550,0000,000 people were able to read a fair summary of the the President's message or hear it over the radio, was problematical. The speech was rebroadcasted in Great Britain by the government-controlled radio broadcasting company which enjoys a monopoly. Reception was perefct. Some listeners were able to hear this rebroadcast in Italy and Germany.

In Italy as is usual in the case of American broadcasts, "atmospherics interferred with the message.

In Germany, the official news Agency circulated excerpts from the message. German newspapers emphasized their denunciations of the message, rather than publishing the message itself.

In Italy, the newspapers played down the message. One big morning newspaper of Rome did not mention the message.

Italy and Germany did not broadcast the message.

THE GERMAN PRESS

LOKALLANZEIGER — "Roosevelt spech of hatred and instigation; United States President in Tow of War Mongers; Attack on Authoritarian States to Cover Up Internal Difficulties."

VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER, Official Nazi Organ—"New Year Sermon of American President; The Old Maneuvers to Divert Attention; New Phrases."

This article was relegated to an inside page. On its first page, the official Nazi Party Organ published a red-headlined article about an Anti-Jewish pamphlet published in the United States. "U. S. A. under Jewish Dictatorship," said the headline.

Congress Bows Back On President's Program

By RONALD C. VAN TINE
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Conservative democrats and republicans prepared today for a fight on a wide front against the foreign and domestic program President Roosevelt outlined in his state of the union address to congress.

Isolationists charged that the president desired to appoint the United States as "world policeman," and that such a policy eventually would plunge the country into war. Economy Bloc leaders protested continuation of large-scale spending, and were ready to challenge budget recommendations. Legislators clamoring for drastic revision of New Deal laws, particularly the nation labor relations act, deplored the absence of specific White House proposals.

Leading administration opponents predicted that congress would "accept the responsibility" for reducing government activities. They interpreted as heralding the end of New Deal experimentation the president's assertion that "the past congresses have met in part or in whole the pressing needs of the new order of things."

Until the administration prepares specific recommendations on foreign policy, national defense and neutrality, congressional leaders will concentrate on proposals for broad changes in existing laws.

The president said "the nation looks to the congress to improve the new machinery which we have permanently installed, provided that in the process the social usefulness of the machinery is not destroyed or impaired." He placed great emphasis upon the word "permanently."

Bi-Partisan groups were prepared to seek revision of much of this "new machinery." They have demanded repeal of the reciprocal trade treaty act, curtailment of the powers of the national labor relations board, overhaul of farm legislation, liberalization of old-age pension provisions of the Social Security act, and changes in relief administration.

Relief became the number one internal problem and the first target for anti-New Deal attacks. The senate campaign expenditures committee report accused relief officials in several states of political activity. Works Progress Administration funds will be depleted nearly a month ahead of schedule.

The president intends to ask congress, in a special message that may be submitted today, to appropriate between $700,000,000 and $750,000,000 to continue WPA until June 30. Opponents of the present relief system were prepared to offer varied plans to "take politics out of relief" or abolish WPA and turn its functions over to the states.

Administration leaders hoped to repulse these attacks by agreeing to certain innovations, including the creation of non-partisan boards in every county to investigate complaints of political activity. They also revealed that Mr. Roosevelt has extended civil service, effective Feb. 1, to approximately 35,000 WPA administration officials.

Senator Edward R. Burke, D. of Nebraska, Labor Act foe, interpreted the message as showing that the administration "realizes the necessity for its revision while Senator Wagner, D. New York had no comment.

Mr. Roosevelt mentioned the the labor problem after telling Congress that the country expected to improve New Deal machinery. " Most of us agree he said "that for the sake of employer and employee alike we must find ways to end factional labor strife and employer-employee disputes."

Tallahatchie Boys Vs. Grenada County

(By L. H. Stubblefield)

This year the Tallahatchie county 4-H Club boys will compete against the Grenada county club boys in crops and livestock judging contest. A silver trophy cup will be awarded the highest scoring crops judging team of three members, and a similar cup will be awarded the livestock judging team. The cups will stay in possession of the school which has the winning team until some other team wins. Each year the teams of the two counties will meet in competition for these cups. Grenada and Tallahatchie have had some strong club teams in the state and tri-states contest for the past two years. This inter-county competition for possession of the silved trophy cups should be as keen as some of the athletic contests.

Murphy Becomes Attorney General

WASHINGTON — Former Gov. Frank Murphy, of Michigan, today began his duties at attorney general of the United States while President Roosevelt prepared to send his name to the Senatee for confirmation.

Murphy conferred with his predecessor, former attorney general Homer S. Cummings, who introduced him to members of his staff.

President Roosevelt was expected to ask early Senate approval of his choice of the 45 year old, red-haired liberal as a member of his cabinet. Generally favorable comment with which both conservative and New Deal senators greeted Murphy's nomination indicated that he would face little opposition.

Little opposition also was expected to the confirmation of former Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce. He was appointed and sworn in to his new post a week ago. Despite severe criticism of WPA, Hopkins personally is well-liked on Capitol Hill and most senators acknowledge his ability as an administrator.

The general sentiment appeared to be that the president should have the right to choose his own cabinet. However, some administration opponents may attempt to block Hopkins' confirmation in an effort to bring forth early the issue of WPA administration.

Delay may be encountered in the Senate judiciary committee, which must pass on Murphy's appointment, if anti-New Deal forces should attempt to question at length the former governor's handling of sit-down strikes in Michigan.

Addition of Murphy to the cabinet will enable President Roosevelt to present a 100 per cent New Deal official family in the face of a congress in which administration strength has been cut by republican gains. Both Cummings and Daniel C. Roper, whom Hopkins succeeded, were considered conservatives.

Murphy was sworn in at noon yesterday in the oval room of the White House by Associate Justice Stanley Reed of the Supreme Court in the presence of President Roosevelt and o group of prominent New Dealers. Also present was conservative Vice-President John Nance Garner.

Murphy took the oath of office on a Bible presented him by his mother 32 years ago.

Cotton Export Drops Sharply

By FRANK J. KNELL
President N. Y. Cotton Exchange

NEW YORK — Most years bring new records of one sort or another in the cotton trade, and the past year has been no exception. In this instance the outstanding new record is in Government holdings of cotton. The year is drawn to a close with the Government of this country financing an amount of the domestic staple practically equal to one year's consumption at the current rate. It is a situation that would have been almost beyond imagination even a few years ago.

Wolrd trade in American cotton has been vitally affected throughout the year by the tremendous and growing accumulation of cotton in the hands of the Government. That accumulation has undoubtedly held the price of American cotton at a somewhat higher average level than would have otherwise prevailed, but in consequence world trade in the American staple has continued to shrink.

It is thought in many quarters that exports of cotton by this country during the current season will be smaller than in any season for about half a century. Another result of the impounding of a large portion of the supply has been the development of wide premiums on nearby deliveries, which has made it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for merchants in this country and abroad to carry stocks of the domestic staple.

As the year ends, it appears that the world is using American cotton at a rate of around 11,000,000 bales per season. This is about the same as consumption during last season, but with that exception it is the lowest rate in 15 years. With domestic production during the past year totaling around 11,850,000 in terms of running bales, present prospects are that the world will have a larger carryover of American cotton at the end of the surrent season than at any previous time in the history of the industry.

The failure of consumption to balance production which is in prospect for this season is due entirely to the decrease in the use of American cotton abread, since the present outlook is that this country will use about an average quantity of the staple.

The price outlook is obscured by the Government holdings, for they naturally create uncertainties as to what would be the price if the loan cotton were released. It seems evident that Congress will resurvey the cotton problems of this country in the coming session.

Great Treason Trial Begins

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE, Jr.
United Press Staff Correspondent

BERLIN — The greatest treason trial since the Nazi accession to power six years ago starts today before the dreaded "people's" court.

In all more than 100 persons were involved and of these it was forecast that 17 or 18 at least would be sentenced to death.

Originally the trial of Neikisch and the other principals was set for next week. At a conference at the Ministry of Justice yesterday, however, officials for some reason decided to start it today.

It was decided also that the trial should be in two parts. Neikisch and two others were selected as the first defendants, charged with leadership in the alleged treason plot. Nineteen others are to be tried later. Less serious charges, such as preparing handbills attacking Adolf Hitler, cabinet ministers and other prominent Nazis, are to be considered first. Then the court is to consider charges that Neikisch and his alleged supporters plotted a reign of terror as part of which they prepared to make attempts on the lives of leading government officials.

There was some surprise when it was made known that German newspapermen would be admitted at some parts of the principal trial. Usually trials before the so-called "people's" court, instituted by the Nazis, are secret.

Neikisch began his political career in the socialist youth movement. This organization split after the invasion of the Ruhr by the French in 1923. Neikisch joined a faction which abandoned the socialist doctrine fo pacifism in favor of militarism and the idea of a German-Russian alliance against France. Neikisch and his followers welcomed the Nazis, believing they would adopt his ideas. It became clear that Hitler based his policy on a "drive to the east." Neikisch was sent to a concentration camp in 1934, and his newspaper was suppressed, because of its increasing tendency to criticize Nazi foreign policy. Neikisch was released after six months but was rearrested early last year on the charge that he indulged in terrolistic activities during 1937.

Aged Woman In Shooting Affair

TUPELO, Miss. — An 80 year old woman, who helped her son shoot it out with officers and make good a defiant boast that he would die rather than surrender his home was held in jail today.

Her son, Dan Bishop, 30 was dead and Jack Grissom, a abiliff, was in critical condition from bullet wounds.

Bishop made good a defiant promise last night that he would die before surrendering his home. When three officers stepped upon his front porch, the obstinate enant farmer shoved a pistol out the door, warned them to leave and then emptied the gun.

One bullet struck Grissom in the wrist, another in the stomach, as he fell, he fired into the cabin and Bishop was fatally wounded.

When Mrs. Bishop, a small woman who weighs only 85 pounds, saw her son fall to the floor, she grabbed another gun and opened fire through a window, Sheriff J. E. Wiygul said. Later she surrendered peacefully.

Wiygul said he had been ordered to remove the couple from the house by the planter who owned it.

Madmen Threaten Two Homes

(By United Press)

CHICAGO — Detectives guarded two homes today while state police from Ohio to Illinoie trailed four madmen, armed with razors, clubs and a hatchet, who were reported en route to Chicago to kill their leader's former wife and four policemen.

The maniacs were led by Frank Haines, 36, former leader of a Chicago bandit gang. They escaped from the state hospital for the insane at Lima, O., Sunday night with a companion who was captured in Cleveland yesterday. From the captured man, Russell Nuckles, 25, police obtained information which prompted them to set traps for the fugitives.

He told authorities Haines had confided he was determined to kill his ex-wife, Margaret Haines, 30, who obtained a divorce in 1932 and four policemen who were instrumental in breaking up his gang.

Two of the policemen, Sgt. Redmond Gibbons and Detective Louis Olson, fought a gun battle with Haines and two companions during a holdup of a Handbook July 8, 1931. One of Haines' pals, Orie Lehman, was killed and the other, James Clark, was captured. Haines escaped but was captured two days later by Sioux City, Ia., police. He was sent to Joliet penitentiary and was released Jan. 15, 1938. Two months later he was arrested at Columbus, O., on a robbery charge and sent to the Lima prison for 10 years.

The other officers, Detective Patrick Touhy and Albert Glass broke up the remnants of Haines' gang a year ago.

When police Capt. George Lynch learned of the threats he assigned two plainsclothesmen to guard Mrs. Haines and her 8 year old son, Frank. Until recently she lived with her sister and an uncle and on the theory Haines might go to her old residence, two plainclothesmen were stationed there also.

Bird Flies Into Bullet

MELBOURNE, Australia — Australian sportsmen labor under greater inconveniences from birds than sportsmen in any other part of the world. In addition to the huge crows which amuse themselves by carrying off golf balls, a magpie got in its work during a rifle match here by swooping down and intercepting the bullet of a contestant. It lost its life, and the rifleman had to fire again.

Britain Imports Wild Geese

WILLOWS, Cal. — Thirty wild geese, of a half dozen different varieties, which took refuge on the Spaulding wildfowl refuge after being wounded by hunters, have been shipped to Peter Scott, British ornithologist, who asked that 80 such birds be sent him if possible.
